The late rise settled the question as to whether the north end of the Benson bridge was lower than the south. A measurement taken from the surface of the water to the floor at each end of the bridge showed a difference of seventeen and a half inches. Who is to blame for it?

From Grayson.

Messrs. Jesse Williams and Chas. Bridgeford, of the McCreary Guards, and Chas. Noonan, of the Governor's Light Artillery returned from Grayson Wednesday afternoon, and report the boys doing well. Although there has been as much if not more wet weather there as here, but few of them are sick and none seriously. It is all a mistake about one of the McCreary's being court martialled and sentenced to be sent home. He was only put in the guard house for a little misconduct.

The stoppage of trains has made provisions scarce, but they are not near the starvation point.

The trial of Craft is in progress and will not be concluded for a week or more, and the prospects are that the soldiers will be there two or three weeks longer. When they do leave they will have to march to Eastern Kentucky Junction, as several bridges are washed out between that point and Grayson. The road is in a fearful condition and it will be nearly impossible to transport the cannon over it. To get harness for the Artillery is what brought Mr. Noonan home. Messrs. Noonan Williams and Bridgeford will return Monday afternoon.

The following letter from our correspondent reached us too late for last week's issue:

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE KENTUCKY,
CAMP NUCKOLS,
GRAYSON, KY., Feb. 8, 1883.

Who wouldn't be a soldier? Very few of the soldiers in this camp are anxious to go home. We reached Grayson about five o'clock Tuesday evening, after an eight hours' run from Lexington. Rain was coming down in torrents, rendering it necessary to stay on the cars all night. The troops were completely exhausted, with scarcely anything to eat, save what little was left in the haversacks, containing more cakes and pies than bread and meat. Two or three boys were sent up town to buy some coffee but they were refused admittance everywhere, and insulted by everybody they met. The night was a black one, rain pouring down all night without the slightest interval. Trouble was apprehended from the action of the people, but with the exception of a few rocks thrown at the train, everything was quiet.

The camp is pitched on an elevation at the northern edge of the town. Owing to the abundance of mud, mud, mud, it was found necessary to put flooring in the tents. Besides this, they are furnished with straw, and are very comfortable. Everybody is delighted with the situation and arrangements of the camp. Everything is in working order now, and we are getting along well.

The "vets," the McCreary Guards, are located on the southern extreme of the camp, and the "Nucks" are close to them. The tents are arranged in a half circle, with the Governor's Light Artillery, or Good-Looking Artillery, or "Pete's of the Camp," as the other boys have appropriately termed them, in the center, on the highest point of the hill. The Frankfort boys are the best behaved soldiers in camp. The statement in the Louisville Commercial that they were all drunk when they reached Grayson is unqualifiedly false. Every soldier in the entire regiment was completely sober when the train arrived here, have been sober ever since, and, on account of the orders that have been published, are likely to stay so. The McCreary Guards are called the Young Men's Christian Association, and there is some talk of making Frank Hutchinson Chaplain.

The country above here is very poor. There is not a macadamized street or road in the county, and when you go anywhere you have to almost swim in mud. There is more mud than soldiers. The people, too, are rough looking and impudent. All day long they stand without the lines and gape at the tents. They began with insults when they met you, but finding that didn't work, have quit it.

The trial is called for nine o'clock to-day, and Judge Brown says there will be no postponement. The probabilities are that we will be here four or five weeks. Neal and Craft look cheerful and protest their innocence. The boys are all well and contented. No Frankfort boy is sick as yet.

Thousands are being cured of Catarrh every year with Hall's Catarrh Cure that the doctors had given up and said could not be cured. 75 cents a bottle. Sold by Joseph LeCompte, Druggist, South Side.

It was reported in this city Tuesday that the warehouse at Edward's distillery, at Clifton, Woodford county, in which was stored a large lot of whisky belonging to Messrs. Dan. Meagher, sr., and John Meagher, of this city, had fallen down and the whisky had rolled into the river. There were two warehouses on the premises and the one which fell was filled with whisky belonging to Eastern parties, and the one in which Messrs. Meagher's goods are stored was not hurt by the flood.

Switzer.

C. T. Gayle, of Frankfort City School, is at home this week.

Aunt Nancy Jones is visiting at Mr. B. F. Jones' this week.

Rain, rain, too much rain and high water for the good of the people.

Mr. W. H. Carter and wife left for their future home in Florida last Monday.

Geo. Daraby and E. R. Jones visited friends in Fayette county last week.

Mr. Frank Hedrick and Mr. J. N. Bridges, of Elmore, were in our village last Saturday on business.

J. W. Carter, E. R. Jones and F. M. Hudson sold a lot of hogs to Mr. John Nod this week, the average weight being 400 pounds each.

P. C. Smith and G. B. Carter speak of starting to Indiana in a short time. Good bye, boys, but we will expect you back in time for supper Saturday.

George Carter and Joe Holton will exchange horses in a few days. As the horses to be exchanged are very valuable they will be very careful how they swap.

The social given to B. H. McCoy, by his mother, on last Friday night, was a grand surprise to him, and a pleasure long to be remembered by his friends that were in attendance. The affair was managed in the very best style, everything being arranged without his knowledge. A splendid supper had been prepared and about half past seven o'clock he and his friends were invited to the dining-room to partake of it. Here we would like to describe the supper, but in the attempt would fail to do it justice, though we can truthfully say that it was all that hungry mortals could wish for.

The rain of last Saturday night did a great deal of damage to property in this neighborhood. The high waters of Elk-horn carried away thousands of rails and shock fodder and hay that was near its banks. Among the many losses was the pleasure boat, Johanna. More than her owner will mourn her loss, as she was the favorite pleasure craft of Elkhorn. When we think of how often she has plied the waters of our beautiful little river, affording so much pleasure to the young people of the neighborhood, it sends a thrill of sorrow to our hearts to know that she has been torn away from us by the raging waters and carried to parts unknown. A liberal reward will be given for the return of the boat to J. W. Carter, her owner.

ONCE A WEEK.

Peak's Mill.

Editor Roundabout:

It is with a sorrowful heart that I undertake to give your many readers an account of the sad happenings in our country. Ruin and devastation stalks abroad in our land. The relentless floods have swept over our once beautiful river and creek bottoms and left not a rail around many farms and many buildings have been swept away. The backwater from the Ohio river is now splashing her muddy waves against the door steps of Mr. F. T. Haydon's dwelling, four miles above the confluence of Elkhorn and Kentucky river. I cannot particularize at this writing, only partially. Suffice it to say that all who live on the Kentucky river near the mouth of Elkhorn creek have had to vacate their homes, except Messrs. Broce and Arch Quarles.

The saddest of all, Mrs. George Flynn has lost every vestige of property she had save her land. It is twenty feet under water. The bridge across Main Elkhorn left its mooring on Sunday night and is now lodged a short distance below. I understand that Mr. Jess Hoekersmith was driven from his home on the Kentucky river, losing most all his household furniture and farming tools also his corn. He has moved to his late purchase of Mr. Robert Taylor, near Knight's bridge.

Mrs. Anna Foree's chimney has fallen to the ground. More work for the masons. Miss Minnie S. paid us a flying visit this week, but Mr. Matthew Sullivan was not here. Bad.

The cause of the recent flood has been discovered. Mr. Arch Q. Triplett has not been in Peak's Mill for two weeks.

Mr. Henry Wright has sold his farm, near Peak's Mill, to Mr. John Pierce and others for seven thousand dollars.

The party that was to be given at Mr. C. S. Hampton's was a failure on account of high water and bad weather. Come again, Mr. Hampton.

Something must be wrong, Mr. Bowman Stone left Peak's Mill before eight o'clock last Sunday night. I guess Miss Nannie can unravel the mystery.

Capt. J. C. Jackson will open his new blacksmith shop in a few days. He requests the public to give him a call. If you can get the Captain to stick the shoes they will be all right.

The 14th of February was St. Valentine's day but Mr. Will Coleman, of Scott county, took his Valentine on the 15th. The probability is that he will remove it from Franklin to Scott county.

Messrs. B. F. Graham and Gooler Bacon had to leave their homes on account of high water. Gooler says it is all right, for he has long had a great desire to visit neighbors and friends and now he has an opportunity. I suppose he will make use of it.

The supper and dance given by Mr. and Mrs. James Hayden was a perfect success. Messrs. Major Hawkins and Bowman Stone were chief musicians, and Miss Emma Stone, Anna S. Hodges, Anna Forsee, and Claude Sullivan were the most popular young ladies present.
